Finding: Eight accounts combine above-median ticket volume (≥10), 25%+ negative sentiment, and above-median revenue (≥$8,156). Falcon Software is the clearest risk: $20,912 in won revenue with 41% of its tickets filed in a negative tone.

Why it matters: Together these accounts represent a meaningful share of revenue that could churn without anyone noticing today.

Action: The revenue team should run executive account reviews on this list this quarter.

Resolution time by priority

Priority	Average hours to resolve
low	59.4
high	57.8
medium	57.5
critical	56.6

Finding: Resolution time is effectively flat across priority: critical tickets average 56.6 hours, low-priority 59.4 hours.

Why it matters: Severity has no bearing on how fast an issue gets fixed. The 50 critical tickets, including 14 security incidents and 11 involving data loss, wait as long as routine requests.

Action: The support lead should define priority-based service levels, starting with an 8-hour target for critical tickets.
